Camphill Roaring Twenties ProAm a roaring success

GLENMOORE, PA – The 2009 Camphill ProAm on May 8 and 9 presented by PECO, An Exelon Company, raised over $103,000 for Camphill Special School, a school for children and youth with special needs. Chairs Greg and Annie Ambrose and Tennis Tournament Founder Anthony DeCecco organized two days of festivities and tennis.

On May 8 over 240 people danced, dined, and bid on live and silent auction items at Chester Valley Golf Club. NPR's Robin Young emceed the event and Chester County Commissioner Terence Farrell made a special appearance. Tennis Addiction Sports Club in Exton hosted the ProAm Tennis Tournament on May 9. Eight teams of mixed doubles dressed in their best tennis whites played for trophies and bragging rights as Camphill ProAm champs. After four rounds of fantastic tennis local professional Gino Carosella and his partner Chris Pesta came out on top.

Camphill Special School is a community and school for children and youth ages four to twenty-one with intellectual and developmental disabilities. For additional information on Camphill Special School or the 2009 Camphill ProAm visit www.camphillspecialschool.org or call 610.469.9236 x132.
